Press Release Body: Norway, Kingdom of (Press Release) September 10, 2008 -- Searching on the internet for the answer to a question can be the most frustrating thing in the world but a new web site helps the answers come to you.

100s-of-tips.com/blog is a site on a mission - to bring together articles and helpful information in one place. A one click stops to find the information that you are searching for. A much quicker way to move forward with the knowledge you need.

Already, the site has a wealth of articles about cars, computers, finance, shopping and travel and it is expanding all the time.

Articles are clearly labeled and tagged and so it's easy to find the information you are looking for rather than spending hours reading through text that doesn't answer your question. You can also sign up for RSS feeds from the site so that you know when new material is uploaded.

All the articles are well written in simple, easy to understand language. Many are written from personal experiences of people in the know and really provide information in a well organized and helpful way.

This is also a great site to find out more information about things you are interested in. Ever wondered how to go about building your own computer? No problem. How about the best way to look after your car on the run up to winter?
