Industry: Software

Press Release Summary: Hackensack, NJ — October 16, 2008 – When it comes to essential desktop computing software, the only name that comes to mind is Microsoft Office. And when you need training and support for MS Office, you need look no further than Save On Support.

Press Release Body: MS Office is truly the industry standard for desktop computer software solutions. Whether you are writing a letter in Word, or keeping a budget in Excel, Office has you covered from top-to-bottom.

"This software package really does have it all," said senior support consultant Lesley O'Donnell of Save On Support. "The numerous options it offers are not duplicated in any other program package on the market today."

But, no matter which specific program you plan on using, you're always going to need someone to offer support and guidance. This is where Save On Support would like to step in. Offering remote-access assistance, they greatly cut their consulting fees, enabling you to get the help you need at prices you and your company can easily afford.

"Remote support is truly the next big thing in computer consulting," commented O'Donnell. "Not only is it extremely cost-effective, it's also very convenient as well, and that's a combination you can't overlook."
