Lottery.co.uk, the UK's most popular independent lottery web site, has announced the introduction of new statistics features which will be of use to any lottery player who like to take previous numbers into consideration when making their selections. The Lottery.co.uk website has always had a free Lottery Statistics page for the main Lotto game, but now a separate EuroMillions Statistics page has been added. The original Lottery Statistics page has also been overhauled to provide even better coverage.

The new EuroMillions Statistics page is divided into four main sections. The first is a Winning Numbers Table that tells the reader exactly how many times each of the 50 main numbers and 2 Lucky Star numbers have been drawn since the EuroMillions game was launched in 2004. The next three sections extract useful information from that main table to provide the player with the winning numbers that have been drawn most often, those that are most 'overdue' to be drawn, and those that have been drawn least often.

The overhauled Lottery Statistics page provides a similar collection of data, and features a main Lotto Number Frequency Table as well as tables that highlight the numbers that have been drawn most often, least often and those that are most 'overdue' to be drawn. In addition, Lotto players are presented with a table that shows how many times the various lottery machines and ball sets have been used.

Although the odds of winning a lottery game are always the same no matter how a player picks their numbers, many players like to refer to statistics before making their selections. Some players like to follow 'hot' numbers that have been drawn more often than the average. Other players like to do the opposite and follow 'cold' numbers that have been drawn less often than average. And still others like to identify the numbers that haven't been drawn for quite some time. The Statistics pages at Lottery.co.uk allow players to do all of this, and a whole lot more, with ease.

Sam Weren, spokesman for Lottery.co.uk said: "Many lottery players who enjoy number crunching used to keep their own detailed records of previous draw result and compile their own stats. Unfortunately, doing the job manually can be very time consuming, especially when you are trying to follow EuroMillions as well as the Lotto game. Our new and improved lottery statistics pages gives lottery enthusiasts all the statistical information they need in a matter of moments - all they have to do is point and click."

As well as providing free lottery statistics, Lottery.co.uk also gives players access to breaking lottery news stories, a huge free Lottery Articles Archive, and more.
