With Christmas just around the corner, children around the world start making their wish lists. Kids are keeping their eyes peeled for new toys in stores and watching television commercials to see all the new things they might want. They are also very busy trying to remember all of their nice acts and good behavior throughout the year; they want to see if that good behavior out ways anything bad they may have done. All of this is the underlying groundwork for the most important Christmas activity....writing letters to Santa. It is a very common tradition to have all of the children sit down at the table with their paper and crafts and make their unique letter to Santa. They all look forward to this activity with enthusiasm. The Santa letter must stand out so that he remembers them specifically. After all, there are millions of other children writing him Santa letters too. Santa must be thrilled to receive these letters. However, can you imagine how thrilled all of the children would be to receive their own letters from Santa? Children would love to receive their very own Santa letter in the mail.

Children want their Santa letter to be perfect. It must contain all of the necessary information. The letter must to explain their excellent behavior and not miss one item on their wish list. It is the last chance they will have to talk to Santa before he comes on Christmas Eve.

However, think for minute; what if Santa could send his own personalized letter back to each child? How amazing would that be? They would see an envelope with their name on the front and be puzzled as to who sent them this package. When they discover it is from the North Pole, the magic of Christmas will fill the room as well as their little hearts. They will jump out of their seat when they see this hand designed letter from Santa. Just knowing that he read their letter and mailed them a package, immediately erases any doubt they had of not believing.

Santa is a very popular man who is extremely busy. When he takes time out of his tight schedule to write a child a letter, they know "it's a big deal." All children know how busy Santa Claus is around Christmas time. He is so busy that he has to have Mrs. Claus and all of his elves help read all the heart touching letters from children. They also all help in preparing for the "big" night. They are quite a team with a lot of work to do, but they enjoy every second of it!
