London date announced in support of their new album, with discounted London hotels on offer close by.

November 21, 2012, 2:41 pm -- /EPR NETWORK/ -- Eighties hitmakers the Human League will play at the Royal Albert Hall on November 26th as part of a UK tour in support of their ninth album, 'Credo'. To coincide with the show, website LondonTown.com has revealed details of discounted London hotels close to the venue.

The Human League formed in Sheffield in 1977, and were pioneers of the burgeoning synth-pop movement. Though the only founder member still standing is song-writer Phil Oakey, this tour and album does feature singers Susan Ann Sulley and Joanne Catherall from the most successful line-up of the band. Recruited for hit 1981 album 'Dare' and its attendant worldwide smash 'Don't You Want Me', Sulley and Catherall, along with Oakey, have formed the nucleus of the band ever since.

They're now celebrating some 35 years in the music business, and have sold more than 20 million records across the globe. The new tour will lean heavily on 'Credo', but casual fans are usually treated to a run through of the hits, which also include 'The Lebanon' and 'Love Action'. The doors open at 8pm. Tickets cost £35.
