X Factor winners to perform their material at the famous west London venue

February 14, 2013, 7:37 am -- /EPR NETWORK/ -- Careful to avoid the pitfalls of so many other TV talent contest winners, girl group Little Mix are on stage this February for a pre-Valentine's concert at one of West London's favourite music and comedy venues.

The foursome will play the Hammersmith Apollo on February 13th at 7pm. Tickets are available from £19.50-£32.50. The show marks their first big-time show dates, which will kick off their debut UK tour, to support the first studio album released in November 2012.

Pop fans and followers of the group can expect the familiar material from the girls' X Factor success and debut album. Fans will surely recognise 'Cannonball', the winner's single from the competition, which topped both the UK and Irish singles charts.

The group followed this success up with another number one single with 'Wings'. Their third single 'DNA' offered a more mature sound, with critics noting that it showed potential growth for the foursome. Who knows whether they'll be around for long- but either way, it's worth seeing them while you can.

Fans and the curious who want to make a night of it should look up LondonTown.com for info and help in finding a London hotel at a good rate. The website specializes in securing deals direct with hotels, meaning some large discounts.

The 4* Seraphine Hotel, Hammersmith has 48% off its double rooms on the 13th, for just £83 for two adults sharing. Or the Hilton London Olympia hotel has over 60% off, with doubles just outside Kensington Olympia at £100 – a short walk to the venue.
