Wundercamera (22nd November – 11 January 2014) will feature 100 contemporary images by a group of international photographers exploring the art of the curator. It will bring together photography of the world's museums and galleries to show how cultural venues display their works – and how visitors behave around them.

The exhibition will show part of Sir John Soane's eclectic collection of art and antiquities (now housed at Sir John Soane's Museum in Lincoln's Inn Fields). The works focus on different aspects of the museum and gallery experience, with the photographers providing diverse interpretations of the photographed museum scenes. Among the images being used is Mark Dion's series Ursus Maritimus [II], a new collection of images of stuffed polar bears that he has encountered in numerous different international museums. Other photographers whose work will be exhibited includes Museum Clausum, Jonathan Faiers, Patrick and Tristram Fetherstonhaugh, Andrew Grassie, Karl Grimes, Vid Ingelevics, Valery Katsuba, Karen

Knorr, Louise Lawler, Stuart Leech/Dulwich Picture Gallery, Richard Ross, Traer Scott, Matt Stuart and Hiroshi Sugimoto.
