London, United Kingdom, November 29, 2013, 11:01 am -- /EPR NETWORK/ -- Winter is knocking at London's door and it's time to bring out the skiing and skating kits from the box and get ready for some adrenaline rushing actions. Travelers planning a vacation in London this winter would be delighted to know that the Natural History Museum has already turned into an action venue since the Natural History Museum Ice Rink, one of the biggest winter events in London is already on.

Situated in the iconic museum district in the southern part of affluent Kensington district, the Natural History Museum promises ultimate winter excitement and visitors looking for an accommodation option within a close reach of the venue would surely find London Premier Kensington a suitable home in London. A property of the prestigious London Premier Hotels or LPH chain, London Premier Kensington is among the finest accommodation properties in the Kensington district, in terms of luxury, convenience and comfort. This winter, the luxurious London Premier Kensington is offering additional delight to its sport and action loving guests by offering them a very access to the Natural History Museum where the winter showdown has started since October 31.

A magical atmosphere has been created at the stunning ice rink, surrounded by diverse historic items at the Natural History Museum and over 70.000 twinkling lights have turned the venue into a 'fairytale' ice ground. The opening of the event has been absolutely romantic with skaters performing on the smooth icy surface in Halloween costumes. It's a dream venue for any person having interest in skating and the required skills and the Natural History Museum Ice Rink has its door open for young skaters. Both experienced and junior skaters can take part in the event since there is a separate junior rink at the venue. The event has already turned into a magnet and would continue to excite skaters and skating lovers till 5th of January, next year.

For visitors who prefer watching actions from a distance over getting into it, can spend a great time at the sides of the rink where stalls selling gifts and food have been set up. Shopaholics can have a great time collecting souvenirs while gastronomists can delight their taste buds by munching on some mouthwatering items. To ensure a charming afternoon or evening for visitors, arrangements for warm drinks and cocktails have been made. Families can enjoy a great dinner with food and wine, entertain themselves with soothing music and young couples can get romantic sipping delicious hot chocolate standing at the open air balcony that offers a wonderful view of the rink.

London Premier Kensington is a perfect accommodation property for skating enthusiast since the hotel stands very close to Natural History Museum. It's a simple walking distance and for people who can't take that trouble can catch a train for the venue from the nearest South Kensington Underground Station.
