About Boquete: Just a short flight from Panama City near the border of Costa Rica rests the green mountain town of Boquete. Described by locals as having perfect, June-like weather all year long, Boquete offers lush mountain vistas and clean air, lightly scented by a profusion of tropical plants and flowers. The town, formally established in 1911 when coffee gained hold as a cash crop, is now a popular place for tourists to visit and retirees to call home. There is plenty to do in Boquete: hike, bike, or drive through several scenic loops for a picturesque view of the mountain region, soak in hot springs, birdwatch, or enjoy the annual Flowers and Coffee festival held in the town each January. English is widely spoken, and with many excellent restaurants and local guides, enjoy the conveniences of modern living and the charm and beauty of Panama in Boquete.
