LONDON, August 13, 2014 -- /EPR NETWORK/ -- This August bank holiday those with a nervous disposition might want to avoid Leicester Square and the festival that has been dubbed the 'Woodstock of gore'. The Vue Cinema is to host the Film 4 Fright Fest and with four days of screenings planned there should be something to interest every horror fan.

The festival films will be shown across three screens, which are the main screen and two discovery screens. The main screen line-up boasts a handpicked selection of new and recently released horror films including You're Next, V/H/S/ 2 and Cheap Thrills, all of which have been well received.

The discovery screens will be showing new and less well-known films such as The Borderlands and the highly anticipated film from Bobcat Goldthwait, WillowCreek. The Duke Mitchell film club will also be showing obscure horror films, shorts and rare trailers on the discovery screen on Saturday night as well as bringing along special guests including actors and directors.

There will also be plenty of previews and special screenings of fantasy and horror films, and revenge thrillers, zombie flicks and apocalyptic visions of the future can all be expected. So if horror is your thing then book now, seating is limited and popular screenings have already begun to sell out.
