Vienna, Austria, May 06, 2015 -- /EPR NETWORK/ -- A new mobile sports device called Reveille: the body power and regeneration booster has been created to release muscle soreness along with sports injury pain. The product has been designed for people needing to lose weight or force their bodies to move as well as professional sportsmen needing to relax their muscles. The creators of Reveille claim that the well-being market has never seen such a simple, light-weight mobile product before. The product combines both magnetic field and far-infrared technology and is designed for everyday use too. Reveille as a innovative sport device can do a lot of things for you such as warming up your muscles, waking up your body, relaxing your mind and calming down your heart in only 40 minutes and without any effort.

Reveille uses 4 functionality programs to help you achieve your wellness goals while training, watching TV or working. Reveille will reduce both stress and pain by working on your body from the inside out. However, Reveille will not make you lose weight or become healthier as this is your task. Reveille will only help you achieve these goals in an easier, more comfortable way. Reveille will relax your body and warm up you right away.

A technology called pulse electromagnetic field (the earth magnetism) is used to reduce pain. In addition to this, the technology will help the body get more energy to alleviate and address discomfort. A type of radiation called far infra-red, similar to sun light, is also used in this product.

Reveille will help you fight soreness and laziness right away. Reveille's target market is people willing to fight at maximum to achieve their dreams. Reveille is a French word meaning rising or waking up, and this product will wake up your cells and muscles in no time. Reveille is also a product family divided into 6 different categories, and each category is in connection with the part it intends to relieve.
