June 1, 2008 - Celebrating the first annual National Cardiopulmonary Resuscitation (CPR) / Automated External Defibrillator (AED) Awareness Week from June 1-7, American Health Care Academy is providing CPR certification course discounts to encourage more individuals to attain CPR certification.

Every year more than 166,000 people lose their lives to sudden cardiac arrest, and learning CPR and how to use an AED can possibly mean the difference between life and death in a medical emergency.

In an effort to have the CPR certification readily available, American Health Care Academy has developed a fast and simple method to provide CPR training that follows 2005 ECC and American Red Cross Guidelines. Individuals, families, or groups who are looking to earn CPR certification and/or First Aid certification can enjoy the online CPR course flexibility in their homes.

Individuals, families, or groups who are looking to earn CPR certification and/or First Aid certification can enjoy the online CPR course flexibility in their homes.

American Health Care Academy's CPR training material includes video demonstrations, which provides for a more engaging CPR curriculum. Prepared by authorized instructors, the CPR videos will enable people to practice while watching. Students can learn CPR at their own pace and take the post-quiz when fully prepared. American Health Care Academy at www.CPRAEDCourse.com efficiently certifies individuals by providing an immediate, printable wallet CPR certification card and sends a wallet card via mail the next business day.

Anyone can learn CPR. It only takes a few hours to train for CPR online – but it could mean a lifetime to someone else. To celebrate this week, American Health Care Academy's CPR courses are discounted to $19.95 per course. Visit www.CPRAEDCourse.com to register and save a heartbeat!
