The largest essay library online now offers free access to thousands and thousands of academic papers. Ever had an assignment and wish you could see how your paper should be formatted, structured or cited? Well, thanks to mightystudents.com you can see exactly what your essay should look like.

Reston, VA (Press) February 26, 2009 - There is a new website that has been launched that will be the largest online academic essay library in the US. Starting today mightystudents.com has just announced that students worldwide can now access the entire essay database for FREE! In addition to their subscription based system the free access is just one more way that students can get the reference help they need. There is just one catch, you have to trade an academic paper or essay that you have written and in return you get FREE access to the essay library for 3 days.

Mightystudents.com was created to assist students who want or need a different kind of reference to help them complete their assignments. A local library may have all of the books you will ever need but they don't have the real world examples of how an academic paper should be structured or formatted. Mightystudents.com has a searchable database of all of almost 190,000 essays and other academic papers where students can search by subject and academic level. "It makes it really easy for students to get ideas, see examples, and apply that information to create a powerful essay" says Jodie Lewis assistant managing director of mightystudents.com.

The site has also received the approval of many teachers and professors because of the help it provides to students who may have trouble with how to get started on their papers. "I think it is a good idea and a great resource for students who are not trying to use the papers as their own, but as a applied resource” said Tom Snyder a high school English Teacher who promotes the site on his blog.

The ability to use the site for free of charge is an original idea that seems to be catching on with many of the site’s new users. “We have one of the largest and most diverse collections of academic papers on the web and we see that allot of students are really interested in trading their papers to get the free access” says Lewis.

Giving students the ability to see what the site has to offer without spending any money is a great way to reach out to those students who may not see the value in a subscription membership until they try it. Once they see how helpful it is to view and download thousands of reference papers anytime day or night they often use the subscription based service.

Sara Jones is a new subscription member who is currently using the service. We recently asked her what she thinks about the essay library and she said “There is almost an endless supply of essays on the site and I can almost always find something that pertains to my assignment”. In her testimonial she also said that what she does is to find the topic she is working on and then see where the work was cited from. “It saves me hours of research time because instead of endless searching; now I know exactly where to look. It is not cheating and I am not using the paper as my own I see what sources were used to write the essay and I work from those” she says. Sara is just one of many students who know the value of having access to the largest essay database online that is growing every week. If you want to see the next generation of academic references, then check out mightystudents.com for more information.
