HolidayCity.com – Some people collect stamps. Some spend thousands of dollars on the latest electronic gadgets. And there are those who find pleasure in procuring exquisitely made antique dolls clothed in luxurious fabrics, miniatures that were lovingly made by artists from the long ago and teddy bears that had been passed from one generation to another. This year, collectors and dealers from all corners of the world would get the chance to browse through another fantastic collection at the London International Antique Dolls, Toys, Miniatures & Teddy Bear Fair on 14th March 2010. The fair, to be held at Dulwich College's Christison Hall from 11am – 4.30pm, was first held in 1977 by its founder and organizer, Dr. Brenda K. Gerwat-Clark. With the college located south of the city, visitors can easily book hotels in London and proceed to the fair fairly easily with public transport.

Educated at the San Francisco State University, University of London, and with a PhD from California Coast University, Dr. Gerwat-Clark has more than 25 years in this specialized field and brings with her a wealth of experience and unique insight that would definitely benefit the collectors and buyers who come to the fair. Hobbyists and visitors to the fair can expect to see an extensive display of exhibits for sale that would include old doll houses, antique and artist teddy bears, modern dolls and antique miniatures. They would also benefit from Dr. Gerwat-Clark's in-depth understanding of the trends and requirements of this specialized hobby with her position as a respected dealer with 9 shops established to serve the needs of the collectors of antique dolls. Visitors can also bring their own items for free valuation by Bonhams Auction House at the fair.

Lee Lai Huat, CEO of HolidayCity.com, is truly fascinated by the passion and commitment displayed by the hobbyists who would travel far and wide just to find the special doll or teddy bear to add to their collection. "I'm just bowled over by the collections that can be found at the London International Antique Dolls, Toys, Miniatures & Teddy Bear Fair. It's fascinating to see a group of people who really appreciate items that are considered to be junk by others. Old is certainly gold in this instance and Dr. Gerwat-Clark should be commended for her effort to ensure that these precious items would be handed down lovingly to the next generation". He further remarked, "We at HolidayCity.com certainly appreciate such a conviction and is pleased to offer great savings on London accommodation so that fellow enthusiasts can come to Dulwich College and find their treasures".
