HolidayCity.com – The vibrant city of Melbourne would again be filled with contagious laughter, rib-tickling hilarity and just downright fun as it plays host to the 24th Melbourne International Comedy Festival from 24th March to 18th April 2010. One of the three largest comedy festivals in the world, the annual event in Melbourne offers a variety of performances which includes stand-up comedy, theatrical offerings, cabaret, film, television and radio programmes as well as the enjoyable street routines. With the festival's healthy level of popularity both locally and internationally, Melbourne hotels are expected to enjoy brisk business.

The Melbourne Town Hall precinct would once again be the venue for the festival with thousands of comedy lovers expected to attend the best that comedy acts from Australia as well as other parts of the world. More than just to entertain, the festival aims to showcase the best comedy talents Australia has to offer as well as offer the chance for international artists to present their works to the local audiences, and to nurture new talents in the industry. This year, visitors would get the opportunity to enjoy another exciting line-up of shows from high caliber artists such as Adam Hills – Mess Around, Alzheimer's The Musical – A Night to Remember, Sarah Millican – Typical Woman, Chris Cole – Boulevard of Reckless Desires and many others.

Lee Lai Huat, CEO of HolidayCity.com, and a keen comedic fan, remarked, "Anybody who's looking for a high dose of entertainment that provides plenty of laughs and drama should quickly book their flights and rooms, and head on to the Melbourne International Comedy Festival this March. For nearly four weeks, visitors to this beautiful city would get to attend stand-up comedy acts by artists of great talent, entertaining cabaret shows, funny musical theaters and many more." He went on further to say, "Melbourne has always been a great place to visit with fantastic dining outlets, quality attractions and friendly people. The comedy festival makes it even more appealing to visit during this time of the year. Be sure to book your Melbourne accommodation with HolidayCity.com and take advantage of the fantastic savings available all year round.”
