PITTSBURG, CA – All Things That Matter Press is releasing the second part of the Timothy N. Stelly, Sr sci-fi trilogy Human Trial. The novel, HUMAN TRIAL II: ADAM'S WAR, goes on sale May 31 at amazon.com, allthingsthatmatterpress.com and through local bookstores. This comes on the heels of Mr. Stelly's 2009 debut novel, Human Trial, which was nominated for SORMag (Shades Of Romance Magazine) Fiction Book Of The Year. The book also received numerous positive reviews at amazon.com and goodreads.com.

Human Trial told the story of a scattershot group of survivors of an alien-initiated thermal war who must not only battle their unseen nemesis, but also their own fears and prejudices. The group is headed by Daron Turner and his co-worker and mother of a newborn named Adam. Part two finds the remnants of that group making a cross-country trek to Big Springs , Nebraska, to unite with others in an attempt to rebuild American society.

In Big Springs Daron immediately butts heads with the colony's leader, a megalomaniac named J.D. Cooks, who has plans to make himself the ruler of a burgeoning world empire. Cooks and Turner engage in an epic clash of wills, and over time Daron and his friends discover that his nemesis is collaborating with aliens to destroy human life, Daron and Regina's son, Adam, now twenty—leads a revolt against Cooks and his loyalists. Later, Daron leads a splinter group in an attack on another alien enclave in Winslow Rock, New Mexico. At the same time, Adam leads his contingent south, into Mexico, for a final battle with aliens that will determine the fate of man.

Both Human Trial ($18.99) and Human Trial II: Adam's War can be ordered online or through bookstores across the U.S.
