On the 30th of July, 2010, metal band Iron Maiden will be continuing their Final Frontier tour with a stop in Dublin. During their 08-09 "Somewhere back in Time" tour, they visited 38 countries, performing to sell-out crowds totalling two million, with expectations to sell out in future venues around the world.

The concert will be held at The O2, a state of the art entertainment venue located on the east side of the city, just a short trip from the city centre. Excited fans have commented on the venue's acoustics and design, looking forward to Iron Maiden's visit to the city.

This performance is a one night stop in the city, ensuring a packed house, and a potentially sold out venue. The Dublin performance is Iron Maiden's first stop on their European tour, which will continue throughout the rest of the summer.

The O2 is located off the River Liffey and is accessible from the city centre by taxi, rail, bus, and even Liffey River Cruises travel by on a regular basis. There are a wealth of hotel and lodging options nearby. Lek Boonlert, Head of Marketing at DirectRooms.com, has said that "The hotel accommodations around Eastern Dublin are popular at any time of the year; however with Iron Maiden's reputation of sell-out shows, hotels near the venue should be booked well in advance."

Those looking for available Dublin hotels, will find an excellent selection for this event, with reliable travel to the venue in close proximity.
