DirectRooms.com can reveal that Paris will be the focus for art enthusiasts from around the world for a special exhibition taking place in October.

Taking place for just two days on 23rd to 24th October, Art Shopping 2010 is a display of the most unusual and captivating contemporary art from a range of international artists.

Visitors to the show will be able to see works represented in glass, sculpture and digital art as well as photographs, original paintings and even furniture.

This year's event will include an area dedicated to urban art with around 20 international artists featuring in the display. People can view a special creation from artists such as French artist Antonin Dreamer, England's Ben Slow and David Le Fleming from New Zealand. The trio have teamed up with other artists to graffiti, stencil and tag a wall that has been specially set up for the exhibition.

Approximately 10,000 visitors are expected over the two days to view the pieces from over 250 galleries and artists that are taking part in the event.

The sixth edition of the show will also include a display of photographs from art and design students as part of a competition focused on the theme of light, with the winning entries on display for visitors.

People residing in Paris hotels can also visit the Carrousel du Louvre which will be the host for the exhibition to see the Trends in Transcription feature. This mini exhibition within the event will be comprised of work from artists that use words and text to depict artistic messages and emotions.
