The Water Festival in Phnom Penh is a three-day event and is one of the most important celebrations for the Cambodian people. The city has a carnival atmosphere throughout and the different events are sure to attract thousands of people to the city. The festival runs from the 20th to the 22nd of November 2010.

Spectators will line the streets and the river, so getting there early is a good idea. The celebrations are free to watch and give visitors the opportunity to experience many aspects of the Cambodian culture, from music to food. Different locations across the city will be used to host events and there is something for everyone.

Lek Boonlert, the Head of Marketing at DirectRooms.com, said, "Those looking for hotels in Phnom Penh during the time of the annual water festival are best advised to book early. The festival attracts a massive amount of people to an already busy area and hotels and other accommodation are likely to be at full capacity. Avoiding disappointment is the best way to a stress free break."

Phnom Penh is a popular and vibrant city any time of the year, but during special festivals such as this, it really comes alive. Visiting during one of these festivals is an ideal way to see the culture of a country one would not normally see. Hotels are easy to find and there is something to suit all tastes and budgets. The city's excellent public transport links make getting around easier and sightseeing a whole lot more fun.
