EXCITING OPPORTUNITY FOR YOUNG MUSICIANS: THE METROPOLIS BALLROOM OF ARLINGTON HEIGHTS ANNOUNCES PLANS TO FEATURE YOUNG MUSICIANS AS THE OPENING ACT FOR OUR FEATURED ARTISTS

Arlington Heights, Illinois – March 7, 2011 - The Metropolis Ballroom of Arlington Heights plans to give local area youth the opportunity to perform as the opening act for nationally recognized talent. "On stage at the Metropolis Ballroom," is a series of planned live entertainment events that are scheduled through the spring and into the summer.

"We are thrilled to bring top level national talent to Arlington Heights," said Thomas W. Manetti, president of the Metropolis Ballroom of Arlington Heights. "We already have an exciting series of spring and summer events scheduled, and the prospect of bringing nationally recognized musical artists for the enjoyment of the community and our neighbors is very exciting. We will also use these events as an outreach for local area youth who are interested in the performing arts."

In the next several months, we will partner with local area schools to give suburban youth the chance to perform as the opening act for our featured artists. In a recent letter published on the Daily Herald's web site*, a local area mother voiced her concern that funds may be cut for the arts and music education in our school districts. At the Metropolis Ballroom of Arlington Heights, we recognize the vital importance of music and the performing arts in the development of our district's students. We are pleased to offer this opportunity for a performance debut; as well as the chance for young musicians to meet established nationally recognized artists.

Thomas W. Manetti, president of the Metropolis Ballroom of Arlington Heights, has several goals for community youth outreach that include:

- Supporting Chicago land youth by giving them access to musical professionals that currently work in the performing arts industry
- Providing a positive experience where student musicians will have the opportunity to perform their well-polished acts in front of a live audience
- To showcase the breadth and variety of local youth music groups to celebrate the diversity of different musical acts including, but not limited to: traditional choirs, swing choirs, glee clubs, rock groups, orchestras, and jazz ensembles
- Giving students the chance to interact with professional musicians so that they may learn more about pursuing a career in the musical performing arts

About the Metropolis Ballroom of Arlington Heights youth outreach

Our dedication to the arts offers unique opportunities for our community's growth: It gives our local youth a chance to perform in front of an audience as the ballroom's opening acts. We plan to do this for as many events as possible. The only requirement is the performers must be of junior high school or high school age. They will be included on the website and in any other advertising for their show date. Plus, we invite the press and talent agents to every show. Who knows? Maybe we can even help bring our beloved community into the national spotlight by helping discover the next major musical talent!
