Guoman's flagship five star hotel, The Royal Horseguards, will be hosting a Bonfire night themed afternoon tea, offering a specially created Fawkes-inspired menu.

The prestigious, luxury hotel famed for its cellar and underground tunnels to Whitehall, is the perfect hideout on a chilly November night, located just moments away from the spot where the original Gunpowder plot was foiled over 400 years ago.

The specially created Fawkes-inspired afternoon tea menu is sure to warm customers through. Guests start the menu with a hot chocolate shot and 'toast your own' marshmallows, served complete with tea-light for toasting.

The menu is complimented with a selection of white chocolate and chilli ganache truffles and tea infused macaroons. The sweet treat is topped off with sparklers and a scrumptious roasted chestnut cupcake with lightly fried parsnip crisp and yummy mini toffee apple lollies which garnish a mulled wine jelly with cinnamon cream.

The Bonfire Night Tea, available until 6th November, is served in The Royal Horseguards' luxurious lounge with open fire. For more information on the Royal Horseguards afternoon tea menus, guests can visit the hotel deals page on the Guoman website.

The Royal Horseguards Hotel was recently awarded the highly acclaimed AA London Hotel of the Year 2010/2011. The hotel also enjoys a prestigious riverside location, within walking distance of Trafalgar Square, Covent Garden, Buckingham Palace and the Royal Parks, making it an ideal location to watch the fireworks displays on November 5th.
