Lake Naivasha and Crescent Island Tour

Naivasha has become an agricultural back water that now exists primarily to service the area's blossoming with flower industry

For many people Lake Naivasha is the first port of call after Nairobi and with its shores fringed in papyrus and yellow backed acacias, bulbous snorting hippos playing in the shallows, a cacophony of twittering birds and gentle climate, there is no denying its appeal over the urban mayhem of Nairobi not only does lake Naivasha's fresh water bestow it with unique ecosystem (in comparison with the other Rift Valley lakes, while are highly alkaline) but it also means the lake can be used for irrigation purposes. Lake Naivasha is now the centre of Kenya's Millions flower industry. The lakes ecology has been interfered with on a number of occasions, notably with the introduction of foreign fish for sports and commercial fisheries. For these reasons and others Naivasha has been the focus for conservation efforts. Despite all that Nairobi people flock the lake every weekend. With plenty of things to see, a fun loving atmosphere and in the still morning mists and undeniable beauty. Lake Naivasha remains the best place to get grips with being in Kenya.

Crescent Island wildlife Sanctuary

The protruding rim collapsed volcanic crater forms this Island on the eastern side of Lake Naivasha. It's a private sanctuary where you can walk beneath the acacia in search of giraffes, Thompson and Grants gazelles, elands, water bucks and countless bird species.

Elsamere Conservation Centre

This conservation centre is the former home of the late Joy Adamson of Born Free

Fame. She bought the house in 1967 with a view of retiring here with her husband, George. Adamson did much of her writing from Eslamere, right up until her murder. Now a conservation centre focused on lake ecology and environmental awareness programs, a visit to the memorial room and a showing of the withered 40 minutes Joy Adamson Story.

One can book a day tour from Nairobi City to visit Lake Naivasha, the conservation centre, visit the crescent Island on a boat ride from Eslamere, have lunch and watch the video and return to Nairobi
