

Tarps Now Increases Protective Flame Retardant Tarp Fabrics for use by Homeowners

St Joseph, Michigan, United States, 2019-Oct-29 — /EPR Network/ — Noting the rapid increase in wildfires throughout California, Tarps Now® has expanded the number of protective Flame Retardant Industrial Tarp Fabrics that can be used to rapidly deploy barriers that can reduce direct contact with heated dust particles, sparks and flames that typically threaten outdoor premises and structures of all kinds. Examples include Fire Retardant Poly Tarps, Fire Resistant Mesh Tarps, Fire Retardant Vinyl Tarps, and Fire Retardant Canvas Tarps.

In addition to such flame-retardant tarp fabrics, Tarps Now® has also increased its commitment to industrial tarp fabrics that can also be used in applications where vertical installations are needed to create protective barriers. In such instances, Fire Retardant Clear Vinyl and Flame Resistant

Polyethylene Sheeting can be utilized to create translucent protective screens. In all instances, industrial Flame Retardant Fabrics create extremely cost-effective barriers to the total loss of structures in the context of wildfire applications. For larger installations, the company also offers industrial grade Fire Retardant Fabric by the Yard and by the Roll.

Other time-tested flame retardant fabric solutions often used in heavy industry such as salvage covers, welding curtains or blankets which are ideal candidates for providing secondary layers of protection to reduce direct contact with heated dust, sparks and flames. These are available in a wide range of standardized sizes and colors, as well as a nearly unlimited range of custom configuration options where variations in fabric weights, sizes, coloring, and fittings are required.
